THE LINE HELD--THEY SHALL NOT PASS

TWENTY BRITISH SAILORS HOLD BACK CHINESE DEMONS

Belated Relief Finally Arrives—Incited By Anti-British Speeches On New Years Celebration On The Banks of the Yangtse River—The Hordes of Yelling Chinese Moved Against the British Quarter Intending To Pillage, Rob and Kill All Residents In the Concession.

A handful of British fighting men, without firing a shot Monday held in check an infuriated mob of several thousand Chinese coolies that attempted to charge into the British concession district of Hankow, of interior China.

Incited by anti-British speeches at a New Year's celebration on the banks of the Yangtse river, the horde of yelling Chinese moved against the British quarter. In their path were a few British policemen, and they stood their ground when stoned.

Twenty sailors of British warships in the Yangtse joined the policemen. They fixed bayonets to their rifles, and they used their rifles as clubs in exchanging blows with the charging mob, but they did not fire. Marines, hastily landed, reinforced the little British party.

Three of the British defending the concession were wounded and taken to hospitals. Twenty coolies bore down on one sailor, wrestled his rifle from him and bayoneted him. Using long poles, the Chinese badly beat two other sailors.

For more than four hours the thin British line held, protecting their civilian men, women and children kinfolk. Then, at nightfall, came belated relief. From the native section of Honkow, or from Wuchang, across the river where the Cantonese government has its headquarters, arrived Chinese soldiers who dispersed the mob.

One of the British acts used by Chinese anti-foreign agitators to incite mad violence was the firing by a British warship upon Chinese soldiers at Wansien in September. A British naval party attempting to release two British merchant ships seized by Chinese soldiers of the northern army was fired upon and a score of British killed or wounded. The Chinese claimed that the British fire killed 2,000 Chinese, while the British asserted approximately 300 Chinese were killed or wounded.

The attack Monday upon the British concession at Hankow is one of a series of anti-foreign demonstrations of recent months in China.

American, British and French warships have been fired upon in the Yangtse river while protecting foreigners in the interior of China. Missionaries have been kidnaped and much property of foreigners has been destroyed.

The British have been the chief objects of attack. An incident at Wansien, far up the Yangtse, last September sharpened the hostility of the Chinese toward them. Forty British naval men on a small unarmed boat went to the rescue of Britishers held prisoners by Chinese northern soldiers on two British merchant vessels which the Chinese had seized. They succeeded in taking off the captives despite heavy fire by Chinese soldiers. Twenty or more of the British were killed or wounded.

The British gunboat Cockchafer replied to the Chinese fire. Accounts differ as to the effect. The British official version was that the Chinese suffered approximately 300 casualties in killed and wounded, of whom 200 were soldiers, the others being civilians struck by stray missiles. The Chinese asserted that the British fired into the city of Wansien, killing upward of 2000 Chinese.

The civil war in China has been productive of widespread violence to foreigners. Cantonese government officials, including General-in-Chief Chang Kai Shek, have announced as the government's program elimination of extraterritorial rights of foreigners, the abolition of the many concession districts of foreign governments and the abolishment of control of China's customs revenues by foreign government.

The Cantonese, backed by Russian money and munitions, and listening to Russian advisers, have issued pronouncements against British and other foreign "imperialism." They included the United States in these pronouncements, in which they declared they wanted a united China for the Chinese.

Foreign missionaries in widely separated parts of China have suffered from Chinese hostilities. There have been numerous kidnappings in the Yangtse basin and in several other provinces.

A week ago anti-foreign riots took place in Fukien province. Foreigners were stoned in one or more of these cities and in several their dwellings were damaged.

It will be open to the public. More than 200 delegates are expected to attend the convention.

BROKE IN STORE.

The store was entered three times December 26 and 31, and January 2. Knives, watches and a vanity case were the articles stolen.

Uncle Sam Is Growing Japanese Snails

The demand for small Japanese snails which are sometimes kept in aquariums has increased in the last few years. At one time all of these snails had to be imported from Germany, but now Arthur J. Poole of the national museum in Washington has started a snail farm. He started last spring with six adult snails which have now increased by two hundred. By the time next spring rolls around Mr. Poole expects to be an important factor in the snail market.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Athens—As the January grand jury met Monday to consider the shooting to death of Lawrence Bolton, 28 year old farmer at Albany last October by four dry raiders the defense presented an affidavit by R. D. Hall, who declared he was a witness of the shooting. Hall swears that an hour before he bought whisky from Bolton and there was a man in the car with Bolton at the time. His story contradicts the evidence of Gladys Farley 17 year old high school girl, who declared she was in the car with Bolton at the time of the shooting, and that no shots were fired from the Bolton machine.

When Bolton was found dead in his machine, he carried a revolver which had not been fired.

Toledo—Frank Krimpa, 19, and Harry Zuminski, 18, were in a critical condition in St. Vincent's hospital from gun shot wounds received while walking home from a visit to friends. Krimpa was struck in the ear and Zuminski was shot under the right eye. Police believe the boys were the innocent victims of bootleggers.

Troy—The Miami county grand jury will investigate the death of Mrs. Ruth Kadel. Prosecutor L. E. Earvey announced at the opening of the January session. Mrs. Kadel died of a fractured skull, received, according to her husband Raymond, when she fell from their automobile while he was driving around a curve in the road.

Kadel later changed his story declaring his wife met death when she jumped from the car while it was traveling 45 miles an hour. He said his wife became angry when he refused to kiss her and leaped from the automobile.

Dayton—Three of six youths who escaped from the Montgomery county jail were still at large today. Three others Nelson Snipes, 17, Columbus, leader of the group and Chester Fague 18, Dayton, were captured in a stolen automobile near Kenton; and Teddy Lowe, 18, Dayton, has been taken into custody by Winchester, Indiana authorities. The youths escaped from the jail shortly after they had been served their evening meal Sunday.

Nelsonville—George Evans, 65, shot in the brain at the age of 14, while hunting is dead after more than a half century of invalidism. He was cared for by his parents until they died and then his brother and family cared for him.

MURDERER OF BEULAH DAVIS A BLACK FIEND

Was Assaulted When She Stepped From Traction Car
On Her Way Home.

With the confession of a negro, Joseph Carr, 23, alias, Joseph Elliott of Cincinnati, the murder of Beulah Purvis, 19, Lawrenceburg, Indiana, was believed to be solved.

Carr was arrested Saturday night while attempting to rob a home in Lockland, Ohio.

While being questioned he told how he had killed Beulah Purvis, whose body was found October 20, beneath the Miami river bridge near Valley Junction station. Her body was badly bruised and the head crushed.

The negro said he had watched the girl for several days with an intent to attack her and that he waited for her at the station and seized her as she stepped from a traction car.

She fought him furiously beating him with her slipper, the negro said. Then he took her slipper and beat her until she fainted, carried her beneath the bridge and when he was unable to revive her, he threw the body into the river.

The negro was taken to the scene of the murder where he reenacted the details.

FARM BUREAU NOTES.

According to a statement just issued by Mr. W. E. Hanger, department of soils and crops at the Ohio State university, Mr. Homer Cromley of Harrison township has an official yield of 108 bushels per acre on 10 acres of corn planted.

The actual weight of the corn was 115.4 which was reduced on account of a 20 per cent moisture content.

This makes Mr. Cromley eligible to the 10 acre Corn Club of Ohio. The variety was Johnson County White.

The annual meeting of the members of the Pickaway County Farm Loan association will be held Tuesday afternoon, January 11, at the Farm Bureau office.

SOME CHICKEN RAISER.

For two years the slogan of agricultural students at Madison high school, Madison, Ohio, has been: "A practical agricultural education and $1,000 at graduation."

David Dunlap is the first student to make the slogan come true. Three years ago, he started with 500 baby chicks. His plan was part of the school project. He attached himself to a firm that raises chicks on shares.

His advance was rapid. He went into business for himself. Later he became a partner with his father. David says he will graduate with $2000 when school is out in the spring.

It is reported in Los Angeles that Anne Cudahy, daughter of the late Jack Cudahy, and Bob Custer of Frankfort, Ky., will be married in Hollywood. Their romance is one of the bridge path. The bride-to-be, of the Chicago Cudahys, is an ardent horse-woman. Custer has been a western film star.

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE

AT JACKSON TOWNSHIP.

The students of Jackson township school sold 3,420 Christmas seals during the past Christmas seal sale campaign. The fifth grade room sold the greatest number with a total of 957 seals sold. Martha Rader of this room ranks as the champion saleslady of the school, having sold 445. Elizabeth Fischer ranked second with a total of 375 seals sold. Elizabeth Huston was third with a total of 325.

Plant Enemies

According to pathologists of the United States Department of Agriculture there are 39 diseases that may attack rose bushes. The wheat crop, too, has its worries, being liable to 31 ailments. The corn plant has 28 and the tomato 42 while the apple has to content with 66 possible maladies.

ASSEMBLY HAS EIGHT WOMEN LAWMAKERS

Other States Have Twice as Many of the Opposite Sex.

Ohio's delegation of eight women who took their places in the state legislature Monday forms one of the largest representations in any state. Connecticut leads all other states with 16 women lawmakers.

This is shown by a survey covering 34 states made by the Ohio League of Women Voters.

Of a total of 122 women elected to state legislative positions in these states only 11 are senators. Of these Ohio has three—Mrs. Nettie B. Loughead, Cincinnati and Mrs. Maude C. Waitte Cleveland, both beginning their third terms and Florence H. Wells, Toledo, promoted from the house of representatives. All are Republicans.

Republicans outnumbering Democrats by more than two to one in the national tabulation. The proportion is even higher in Ohio. Of the eight women in the Ohio general assembly, Mrs. Virginia Barker Harding elected to the house from Gallia county, is the lone Democrat. All others are Republicans. Mrs. Harding holds the distinction of being the first woman legislator to be elected by typically rural county in Ohio.

Eastern states were more kindly in their attitude towards women candidates than was the west. Five or more women are members of the legislatures of Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Vermont and Illinois, Wyoming, first state to grant suffrage to women, has only one woman legislator.

While Ohio has increased the representation of women in the legislative halls by one, there was a reduction from 130 to 122 in the number elected in all states this year as compared with last.

Ancient Clock Governs

All Bank's Activities

Asbury Park, N. J.—The Merchants National bank here opens its doors in the morning, regulates all its activities and closes at night by a tall, mahogany clock brought from England 311 years ago, and acquired by the bank's president, Samuel Reeves, in 1913 for $21.

Mr. Reeves said he believed the timepiece was at least 500 years old. It has no markings to indicate its age and birthplace. The clock was brought from London by Isaac Woodard in 1615 to Monmouth county, New Jersey.

When Charles Woodard, a descendant, died at the age of seventy in 1912, he willed the clock to a nephew, Dare Switchin of Asbury Park.

Switchin owed Mr. Reeves some money for some articles worth $21 and after keeping the clock for a year or so, decided to turn it over to his creditor in payment.

Everything comes to him who waits including a bawling out the traffic cap.

STANT FAMILY LOST HOUSEHOLD GOODS

And Barely Saved Children From Fire In Home.

Last Friday afternoon James Stant and wife who resided in the brick building formerly used for school purposes in Jackson township, near the residences of W. Vernor Grant and Willard Justice, barely saved the lives of their four children from the building which was accidentally set on fire while they were out catching chickens.

The family lost nearly all of their household goods in the fire which completely gutted the interior of the building.

The building was owned by Mrs. Shortridge and was insured in the agency of Boyle & Johnson.

Mullet's Legal Standing

The bureau of fisheries says that the mullet is a fish. The question arose many years ago, when an attempt was made to restrict the catching of certain kinds of fish in North Carolina, the mullet among them. A fisherman was apprehended who had caught a mullet. His defense was that the mullet had a gizzard instead of a stomach—therefore, it was a fowl. The judge agreed with him.

HIT-RUN DRIVER SERIOUS MENACE

Plan Organized Campaign to Stop Lawlessness.

On its own behalf and on behalf of the 842 clubs affiliated with it throughout the country, the American Automobile association has broadcast a strong appeal urging relentless warfare on the "hit-and-run" drivers everywhere.

The appeal, which went out under the name of Thomas P. Henry, president of the A. A. A., was based on reports which show that this particular brand of lawlessness and cowardice has not received in the past the attention which it deserves. Hence the need of an organized campaign by the motorists generally to do away with this species of driver.

Mr. Henry's statement pointed out the fact that in some cases it is difficult to get at the hit-and-run driver is all the more reason why he should be dealt with in exemplary fashion once the law gets hold of him.

"There are two ways," said President Henry, "in which members of the A. A. A., motorists generally, and other agencies can give invaluable assistance in removing this blot on motordom.

First Apprehend Driver.

The first, succinctly, is to actually apprehend the hit-and-run driver or at least to give chase so that his license number can be made available immediately to the police. It often happens that motorists who have an opportunity to perform this public service are more interested in seeing what has happened to the victim of the accident than they are in capturing the person directly responsible for it.

"Club members and others, I am sure, will be more than willing to do their share in this respect. Such a movement already has been started by many clubs affiliated with the American Automobile association.

"The second way is more complex and seems to require more than the co-operation merely of motorists. It is the reduction of this hysterical practice by educating all drivers to the utter, hopeless stupidity of it. Motor clubs and all other agencies should take part in such an educational campaign.

Is Pathetic Figure.

"The hit-and-run driver, from a psychological perspective, in many cases, is a pathetic figure. He is the victim of the worst of all human emotions—fear. His action undoubtedly makes him criminal where his ordinary impulse might be toward the very best in our civilization.

"He is the victim of a human temptation, one that besets all of us—to flee from trouble. Fortunately, most of us are capable of resisting the temptation.

"A concerted campaign, I believe, could do much to show the hopeless futility of running away after an accident. Guilty or not guilty of carelessness, negligence or infraction of the traffic laws, the minute the driver who figures in an accident flees, the burden of proof of his innocence rests with him and he puts himself in the worst possible position before the law. There is a tremendous assumption of guilt that cannot be allayed.

Convict Themselves.

"Innocent, in a great many cases, drivers go on daily convicting themselves by not having the courage to face the difficulty into which they have been thrown. It is time such emotionally unstable persons were taught the great folly of their actions.

"Motor clubs can take the lead in this vital educational movement. It is one in which other agencies will co-operate heartily. Primarily it seems the task of organized automobile ownership for the practice is one that is leaving an indelible scar on the face of motordom.

"I am confident that remarkable results will be achieved once the A. A. A. local clubs set their shoulders to the wheel."

Humming Tells If Pinion Is Proper

Whether the pinion is properly set with the ring gear can be determined by any car owner through a very simple experiment.

Does the rear end hum? Has it plenty of grease and the right kind of grease?

If the answers are in the affirmative the rest is simple.

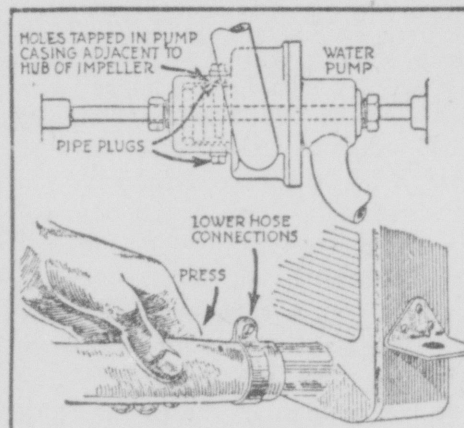

If humming is on the upgrade the gears are too tight.

If humming is on the downgrade the gears are too loose.

Cold-Weather Tests for Good Water Circulation

One cold winter morning, when Johnston stepped on the starter of his car, the engine hesitated momentarily, although it finally turned over and began to run. The radiator that morning was frozen, but Johnston attributed this to running the car out in the cold. For several months afterward he noticed that on long-continued runs the engine boiled. Finally, when the car was placed in the repair shop, he learned that the retaining pin of the pump rotor had been sheared.

Unquestionably this had happened on the frosty morning when the radiator was found frozen. The car had been driven continuously since that time with the pump failing to deliver any circulation.

Johnston then made use of two simple methods shown in the illustration for testing whether the pump rotor is broken or if the radiator is frozen.

Two holes are tapped through the pump casing directly opposite the hub where the shear pin is placed, and small pipe plugs are set into them. By removing the upper plug it is possible to determine if the pump propeller revolves with the shaft whenever the car shows signs of overheating, and the removal of both plugs makes it a simple matter to renew dowel pin quickly.

The test for freezing is made by pressing between the fingers the lower rubber hose connection to the radiator. When frozen or partly frozen the hose does not collapse readily and it is necessary to thaw it out.—Popular Science Monthly.

Keep Tail Light Burning

Always notify the driver of a car that has no tail light burning. Perhaps he does not know it and the warning may result in avoiding an accident and arrest, or possibly saving a life.

When an automobile is not kept in reasonably good mechanical condition and an accident occurs, due for example, to defective brakes, the motorist is liable for any damage unless the injured was contributorily negligent.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

Cheap gasoline makes a fat graveyard.

It must be awful to have a speedster complex and a truck chassis.

A pessimist is a person who looks both ways before crossing a one-way street.

In Detroit a pedestrian seems to be a man whose car is suffering from ill-health.

If all the lady drivers were placed end to end, they'd be on the wrong side of the road.

If he's idle, rich, and things like that He may be an aristocrat.

Midwinter Mode Shows Light Furs, Dark Coats

And now women of fashion have something new to think about—light, fluffy fur on the dark cloth coat. Fashion is tending just that way. A jungle green suede with red fox, a wine-red cloth with natural lynx, a black broadcloth with a spectacular trimming of badger, so the story of ultra-smart coats continues in endless fascinating contrasts of fur and cloth.
Not content to simply encircle the neck, the fur keeps on traveling down the front in tuxedo revers to the very limit of the hemline. The newest novelty of all is the huge fur pocket, positioned to attract attention at first glance.

Favored Winter Modes

in Women's Footwear

The following outstanding features will mark this winter's fashions in women's shoes, according to Harper's Bazar. Cabled dispatches from the magazine's Paris bureau confirm the new trends:

The vogue of boa and other serpent
skins is about over in Paris.

Lizard and alligator will be extensively used, but owing to a threatened shortage of these skins, will be employed more for trimming than for entire shoes.

Many of the walking and semi-sport shoes will be trimmed with lizard. It will also be seen on smart patent leather afternoon models, either sandals or modified pumps. It will be used both in matching and contrasting colors.

In spite of the protest against the pump, on the score that it widens the foot, it is still being worn by many of the world's smartest women.

Brown patent leather will be used with semi-sport costumes.

Dull enamel is being shown in Paris in combination with colored kid or patent leather.

For sports, travel and country wear,
the oxford or the strapped model has become well established. Its heels are growing broader and lower. Brown tones in calf or colored kid are the favorites, with neutral shades in preference. Yellowish shades are not good.

For afternoon shoes, sandal models will continue popular with several new materials appearing. Among these are ottoman silk and a new heavy moire.

Correct materials for evening shoes
include satin brocades of all kinds, both all silk and silk and metal, and gilded and silvered leathers although these last are now smarter in trimming than in entire shoes.

Jewel-studded heels will be used, but only for very special occasions. The same will hold true for the new elaborate "foot jewelry" which is a feature of the winter's footwear.

"The evening shoe situation is this:
Every smart woman will have two types of evening shoe, the very plain and the very elaborate, and the whole chic of the thing will lie in choosing the right occasion for each type."

Straight Silhouette

Wins Favor in Paris

The formal season in Paris has emphasized the complete domination of the straight silhouette. Coats, frocks and evening robes are all smartest when the line is uninterrupted from shoulder to hem. A slight blousing effect, all around if you wish, but preferably confined to the back, has also earned a definite niche in winter fashions. Both bodies and skirt should be fairly loose save at the hipline,
where molded effect is permissible.
Straight, full, easy-fitting and of course short, with a slight blousing to indicate a waistline which is almost normal—that is the final Paris prescription for the winter silhouette.

Frock of Chinese Inspiration

A smart frock, obviously inspired by the Chinese costume, is of black satin and red crepe de chine. The satin is used for the plaid skirt and for a coat edged with gold braid. Red crepe de chine forms the underblouse which is embroidered in Chinese designs in gay
colors.

Girls of Today Leave

Lap Dogs to Old Maids

Croydon, England.—Up-to-date girls
favor larger dogs, like the Alsatian,
believing they harmonize with fashion,
but the old maids and elderly women
still cling to lap dogs and the toy poodles, say judges of the Croydon dog show.

The girl of today believes that her preference for the larger breed of dogs is an indication of independence and strength, the judges decreed after looking over the exhibits and their mistresses.

One woman judge said: "Alsations look, and sometimes are, fierce, but they harmonize with the present-day fads and styles and therefore are popular."

Discovered in a double boiler...

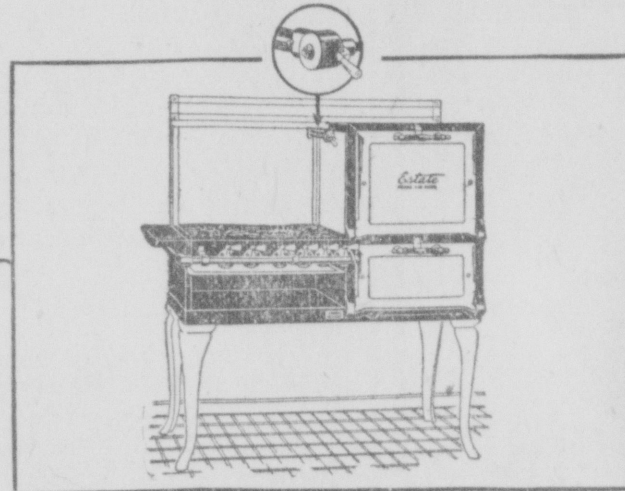

the secret of tempting pies, cakes and cookies

WOULD you ever think of looking in a double boiler to find the secret of baking cakes "like mother used to make"?

Yet it was in the double boiler that the secret was discovered. It's really quite simple. Cereals and other delicate foods, you know, do not scorch when cooked in a double boiler—its construction permits the heat to be distributed evenly throughout its contents.

And now, in the oven of the Estate Gas Range, this same
"double boiler" construction
has been adopted. This oven, built on the two-wall, "double boiler" principle, bakes with uniform heat. There are no
"hot spots" to cause scorching,
no shifting of pans, no "peeking in" necessary—pies, cakes and cookies come out symmetrical
in shape and color.

Let us show you today how,
in the double boiler, the secret of successful baking was found.

Eskimos Tune in Radio to Learn Day of Month

New York.—Radio operators who keep two sets of batteries, one in the cook stove oven thawing out, while the other, in use, is freezing, were described by Dr. William H. Easton, New York chief of the Westinghouse broadcasting system, in a talk on radio problems north of the Arctic circle.

"Many Eskimos are radio fans," he said, "and among them is Pan-li-Pah, who was with Peary when Peary discovered the North pole." Virtually the entire white population of North America north of the Arctic circle is receiving personal messages regularly by radio, he said.

One of the uses of the radio, he said, is to inform inhabitants of sub-Polar regions of the day of the month. The days being all "nights" in winter, the population sometimes gets as much as eight days behind the calendar.

Ornate Wraps for Dressy Occasions

Velvets Are Much in Vogue and Jeweled Effects Win Favor.

Modistes and their clientele have both expressed the feeling lately that a significant movement forward has been due in the styles of evening wraps, says a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. Gowns have been sensational in design from time to time while wraps have remained mostly so conventional as to have become almost standardized. A wrap-around or a coat of some handsome material with a collar, perhaps cuffs and a border of fur, has been the usual type of wrap that has been worn over an evening gown. The gown itself has become more elaborate in detail, tending more to an ensemble effect, more emphatic in relief because the wrap was of less complex architecture.

The more ornate the gown the simpler the wrap, plain velvet, brocade or metallic cloth covering the most extreme gown of solid pailletted pattern with crystals, jewels, ostrich, fur, gilt and silver. The latest ensembles flashed before the eyes of fashion are daring combinations of gorgeous materials and a wealth of ornamentation of one sort and another.

All of the prophesies of the vogue of velvet are realized in the latest evening wraps, for it is far and away the favorite fabric among designers. There must always be, of course, a variety of styles in material, and there are many this season; but the flattering quality of velvet lures both the designer and the woman who give thought to appearance. The velvet wrap is not, however, the same thing that has been offered before. The character and quality of the material alone are insufficient and are used only as a foundation for beautiful embroidery in silk, metal and chenille, hand painted and a dazzling surface of sequins, beads and jewels. To this is added in some of the latest models fur, ostrich, marabou or fringe in a scheme which impresses one almost as over-elaboration.

When plain velvet, panne or chiffon velvet is used, the wrap is lavishly trimmed with fur, an enormous collar, wide cuffs on the inevitable dolman sleeves and, almost always, a deep band about the bottom. On some of the new wraps this band is shaped to form a very deep border, straight or flaring, the type of the wrap that suggests luxury in every detail as well as the last word in comfort.

Satin Also Shown.

Curiously enough, however, the first model shown in the richly embroidered types of evening wrap from a prominent Paris house is not of velvet, but of satin. It is an ivory white in dolman shape, with sleeves cut in a deep line at the intersecting point and tapering toward the hand. Almost the entire surface of the back, the front and the greater part of the sleeves is covered with a graceful pattern, rather medieval in feeling and done in fine gilt and silver thread. Points and motifs in the design are made of brilliants as centers, combined with crystal beads, giving an effect of crystalline loveliness that is difficult to visualize. A collar and cuffs of white fox finish this wrap, which will be worn by a fashionable bride, not with her wedding dress, but with an elaborate evening gown of georgette and polished silver spangles. This wrap is lined with velvet, as many of the evening wraps are, in a faint shade of rose.

These delightful wraps are voluminous and graceful, in dazzling white with linings of velvets in delicate shades of blue, rose, yellow, the orchids, of which there are many subtle degrees, and green. A superlative wrap of white chiffon velvet is embroidered as a deep border with sequins in opalescent tints, very lustrous and pulsing with color, with strass and crystal beads interwoven.

This, with all its richness of design, is lined with white velvet and has a deep collar and cuffs of snowy fox.

Another wrap of distinction has much the suggestion of moonlight—cold, silvery and elusive. It is made with silver in a conventionalized fleur-de-lis pattern picked out with crystal and steel silver spangles. White fox is used for the collar, and a silver, lame, shot with palest blue, for the lining.

Something as delicate, subtle and lovely as has ever been shown is the new brocadeed chiffon, light as thistle-down and clinging in quality like a cobweb, and the pattern of downy velvet is in relief. This is a fabric of distinct elegance, particularly in white and in black, but a large card of charming colors, delicate in shades, is shown for evening wear. Wraps made of brocadeed chiffon velvet are lined with a plain color in velvet or satin, some with lame, which is now shown with any of the new evening shades and of a very soft texture. One of orchid and silver velvet is a pattern of the flower with large, graceful leaves.

Evening Wrap in Rich Brocade of Gold and Diadem.

is lined with silver lame showing a background on silver and has a large collar of chinchilla, which is considered very smart this season.

A detail of some of these wraps of lame and all of the metal brocades is the touch of silver or gold in a long tassel with which the sleeve is finished, or which is attached at a corner of the material in a model having a cape effect formed of a square cleverly shaped to make a sleeve. Ornaments to serve as fastenings are made of gold or silver cord and of beads.

Fur is important in evening wraps and many varieties are shown. Fox is, of course, much in demand, especially white fox and the lighter colors. The intense shades introduced two seasons ago are little used except on the wraps that are designed for the southern resorts. Sable, mink, chinchilla are all good, and several novelty furs are shown, though few of these are fine enough to combine with handsome fabrics. Because of the number of new colors in the velvets and metal brocades some of the new evening wraps have the roll collar of the material.

In plain fabrics the collar is shirred and heavily padded, the most fashionable shape being very large and standing away from the neck and round. Ostrich is used with dainty effect on some of the wraps of chiffon brocade, and on satin wraps that are elaborately embroidered or beaded. A lovely evening dolman cape of chiffon velvet in the new shade of orchid called diadem is trimmed with ostrich, which forms a boa collar and borders the front and bottom edges of the garment in the most ethereal way.

Color Is Important.

Color enters into the latest mode in a manner so significant that trimming and the entire scheme of ensemble is a problem which requires study and the exercise of discretion. Old dyes have been treated by experts to produce new phases with many delightful results, with new and entertaining names to designate them. There is a rare shade of turquoise and an old gobein blue. That soft shade that became popular under the name of bois de rose is now called meadow pink. A velvet in mellow gray is known as gull, and a flaming contrast is castilian red. Golden poppy is a vivid orange, and athenia is the old-fashioned ashes of roses.

A chiffon velvet wrap in the new yellow known as popcorn, lined with satin in the same shade with wide, standing collar and cuffs of kolinsky, is a delightful illustration of the possibilities in ensembles and combinations with the new colors. Cameo pink and silver chiffon velvet brocade in combination have a voluminous collar of chinchilla fur and lining of silver lame shot with pink. There are in the fine fabrics artistic colorings that will be shown to advantage also in the coming millinery modes, in ostrich feather trimming and in the big evening fans.

CANCER CAN BE ERADICATED AT ITS INCEPTION

Declares Famous Surgeon Dr. Fitz-Patrick, Examinations Urged.

Dr. Gilbert Fitz-Patrick, of Chicago Illinois, chairman of the Illinois executive branch of the American society for the Control of Cancer, said Monday in a statement:

"More than $3,750,000,000 is lost annually as an economic and social waste caused by cancer.

"One woman in every five dies from cancer.

"One man in every eight dies from cancer.

"More than ten million dollars is spent in research laboratories annually in seeking the cause of cancer.

"When the people assumed their responsibilities in the tubercular problem the death rate was scientifically cut in two in twenty years.

"It is not fear that we wish to instill in the minds of the people, but it is our idea to make the public realize the importance of periodical examinations.

"If cancer is caught in time—that is, if it is located soon after its development—the life of the individual can be saved, but if the cancerous growth is unrecognized and not treated, the patient in all probability will die."

Hohenzollern Name Still Frequently Seen

Berlin.—Under the German republican regime the Hohenzollerns have been in the discard nearly eight years, but the family name and the names of its members are still the most frequently encountered of any in Germany.

They stare at one from the street corners and shop windows and are emblazoned on the facades of innumerable buildings.

That the German republican mind is becoming impressed by this fact is indicated by a statistical exhibit which shows that of the 300 high schools of Prussia conducted under state authority 136 bear the name of one member or another of the Hohenzollern family. William I and William II appear 25 times, Queen Victoria Louise 23 times and Empress Augusta Victoria 19 times.

Fisherman's Lunch

By SUSAN GIBBS

(Copyright.)

TERTIA was busily painting letters on the bow of her comfortable, safe-looking rowboat. "Fisherman's Luck," said the old man who had been sitting on a rock watching her as she traced the white letters on the spic and span green surface of the bow.

Tertia laughed. "Look again," she said, merrily. "I suppose nine out of every ten who read it will see it the same way." Then she remembered that the old man's eyesight might be failing and she read for him. "It's 'Fisherman's Lunch,' Uncle."

Everybody along the shore called him "Uncle" although no one who had the right by kinship had ever been known in these parts.

"Wall, what does that mean, Tertia?" he asked. "And why did you paint out the letters your father had put on the boat?"

"I'll answer your first question last, Uncle," replied Tertia. "Father named the boat after me, Tertia. He had named me Tertia because I was the third child and his fancy was for naming all his children by numbering them in Latin. I don't like the name for a boat, and now that Dad is gone he can't be hurt. And—your second answer: I have gone into a business of my own with this boat and the new name is an advertisement."

In this cove where Tertia Miller meant to ply her new trade there was good fishing.

She was going to carry sandwiches, cakes, home-made doughnuts and pies in season in her small boat and row about among the silent groups of fishermen each day at mealtimes.

Her mother was no longer young and they lived together in the little cottage that belonged to the club and which they were to be permitted to use as long as they liked. This was in the form of a pension to her mother in appreciation of the long services of old Captain Miller.

Her brightly painted boat caught the eye of every fisherman as she rowed along and it was not long before she was handing out lunches to those who hailed her. If coming alongside disturbed the home-life of the gentle fish, no man cared since he was to be refreshed by so splendid a lunch as Tertia provided.

Rain or shine, early and late, she was out with her lunch boat and she and her mother were both surprised at the amount of profit they found to their credit.

Tertia was happy. She told herself it was the success of her project that made her heart sing. It was, she argued, because of the joy that achievement brings to one.

Perhaps that was a part of the reason. But there was another cause for her gladness. Tertia was experiencing the first treasured moments of romance.

Archie Dove had put into the harbor one stormy night and for lack of knowledge of the water had anchored his craft until dawn should give him a better idea of his locality. And—at dawn, when the fishermen began to come out to get their catch on the flood tide after the storm, had come the little craft which bore the letters, "Fisherman's Lunch."

It seemed almost to Archie as if Tertia in all her beauty had come toward him out of the very dawn itself, so whimsically, so fancifully had he first beheld her.

He had come out of his cabin to begin to get under way. He was cruising alone so as to work out his novel. The green boat was approaching and the soft morning light shone on the gold of Tertia's hair.

"Fisherman's Lunch," he read to himself when he could discern the letters. "Fisherman's Luck, I'm thinking," he added.

Tertia rowed slowly, as was her custom.

"Have you—something to eat?" he asked.

Tertia smiled. "I should think I had—fresh coffee cake and doughnuts and—"

Archie stopped her then and there. He was too hungry to listen without acting.

"May I have—some?" he asked, still with a boyish shyness.

It was only a moment before she was alongside his boat and he had climbed down into the one bit of seat that remained empty in her boat.

When she explained to him her work he suggested that as it was early and that there were few fishermen out she might wait for a cup of coffee that he could make in his own galley?

Tertia did. He deftly came aboard her boat with mugs of coffee and for the first time Tertia ate of her own wares.

Archie did not get under way. He found reasons for remaining in the harbor to write his book and he found himself too busy to go ashore to buy provisions, thereby making it necessary for him to get almost everything he ate from Tertia.

His novel progressed and his heroine suddenly began to look like Tertia. He had told her all this—and more—and that is why the little captain of "Fisherman's Lunch" was so thrillingly happy.

"They say it's bad luck to change the name of a boat," muttered old Uncle one evening when he watched Tertia walking along the beach with her new-found lover. "But—that don't look much like bad luck to me," he added, grinning his wrinkled old grin.

x x x x x x x x

Commencing Thursday night, January 6, at the Hartman theater Columbus, Glenn Hunter, whose fame is linked with "Merton of the Movies," will open an engagement of three nights, January 6, 7 and 8, with a Saturday matinee, appearing in "Young Woodley" which has just closed a triumphant season in New York and completed runs in Philadelphia and Chicago.

This is a play of youth and it has the benefit of youth in its authorship being written by a young man who is still close enough to the life of the characters he has faithfully and exquisitely drawn to write with real understanding and full sympathy. The author is John van Druten, still in his twenties, a lecturer at Aberystwyth university, Wales. Mr. Van Druten saw his play for the first time only a few nights ago, the play the censor in London having raised an objection to its presentation in the British capital.

Mr. Hunter will play the title role that of youth, shy and diffident, wondering at the emotions that come to him. Helen Gahagan will appear in the part of the professor's wife with whom the schoolboy falls in love. A. E. Anson will portray the husband, stern headmaster of the school. Grant Stewart will be seen as the elderly Woodley, father of the boy and the lad's schoolmates will be played by other members of the New York cast. Mail orders now. Matinee Saturday.

NO. CAROLINA'S
NEW INDUSTRIES

Steadily Shifting From Cotton Fields to Mill Centers.

Washington.—"North Carolina is passing through a renaissance. Due to her steadily intensifying shift from cotton fields to mill centers, and from once-idle streams to throbbing dynamos, she has suddenly rediscovered herself on the threshold of industrial power."

With this introduction Melville Charter tells what he saw on a motor tour of North Carolina's industry, development, historic scenes and interesting people, in a communication to the National Geographic society, from which the following is extracted:

"For centuries wild horses have been roaming on the Cape Hatteras banks, and current tradition has it that they are descended from Barbary ponies which were brought over by Sir Walter Raleigh's colonists.

"Our quest landed us on a naked, sun-baked spit where men were driving the so-called 'banker ponies' along the beach and into a corral made of timbers from old wrecks. Perched on the pen's top rail, with the beach-pounding surf along one edge of the narrow spit and the sound, with its rough sailboats, on the other, we took lens shots at the inclosed jam of 200 horses, as they reared and kicked each other into a state of bloodied noses and wildly rolling eyes.

"Some of the herders lassoed and cut out colts for branding or sale. Others yelled out their branding marks, recognized on mares, and claimed the accompanying foals.

"A few years ago these putative descendants of Raleigh's little Barbary ponies were bringing $50 to $125. The auctioneer, in explanation, complained, 'Tow much gasoline about naowadays!'

"The legendary North Carolinian who in the '60s called his three daughters Rosin, Tar, and Turpentine would today be naming them after cigarette brands, furniture trade-marks, and cotton goods patterns.

Charlotte Spindle Center.

"Charlotte, situated between the big hydroelectric developments along the Catawba and Yadkin rivers, is a plexus of this new industrialism. In the last 25 years the number of textile mills operating within a 100-mile radius of that city has increased fivefold, with a present spindleage of 10,000,000.

"An hour's ride beyond Charlotte we entered Gastonia, one of the largest textile centers in the United States. Of its 20,000 people, about three-fourths are workers in the 42 mills whose tall stacks cut the sky. Yet, in the town's broad, tree-shaded streets, lined with neat cottages on well-kept, flower-fringed plots, one felt no oppressive sense of concentrated industry, but rather the restfulness of some model suburb, wide-spread to sun, air, and surrounding countryside.

"With mill workers' cottages rentable at $3 a month, with water and electric light free, and a mild climate, necessitating little fuel, which is obtainable at cost, it is not uncommon for mountain families to work at Gastonia long enough to pay off their farm mortgage and then return to the Blue Ridge.

"Gaston county contains 98 textile mills, which represent one-sixth of the state's total spindleage and consume almost one-third of her cotton crop.

"A few hours' drive from Chimney Rock further into the mountains brought us to Asheville, the gateway to what North Carolinians have well named the Land of the Sky. Never was an altitude of half a mile above sea level so unobvious, in all the tonic atmosphere. Set in a vast bowl, Asheville is encircled by mountains whose 20 highest peaks top all altitudes in the Eastern states. Could the Titans return, they might appropriately seat themselves as spectators of one of Asheville's big golf or tennis meets.

"It was on the Biltmore estate, near Asheville, that, with the founding of a forestry school, the first steps in American forest conservation were taken.

Turning Back Time.

"Surrounded by the modishness of Asheville, one scarcely realizes that only 50 miles away mountaineers are living a ruggedly simple existence behind hand-hewn timbers and on small 'switchback' farms, with Revolutionary looms and spinning wheels alongside their chimney pieces of native rock.

"It was a farseeing woman from among the 'boiled-shirt' life of Asheville who persuaded these remote, almost forgotten, mountain folk to set their long-idle looms going again. Today there are half a dozen handicraft centers scattered through western North Carolina.

"Back in 1912, when only one North Carolinian in 380 owned a motor vehicle, the then-existing roads answered the needs of the day—answered that is, in the sense that the single log across a North Carolina mountain stream then answered as a footbridge. They got you somewhere, no matter how.

"In 1921 the state legislature authorized $50,000,000 worth of road bonds. Today the bond issues total $85,000,000.

"Carmen, with a hand on her hip and a rose between her lips is a world away from Winston-Salem's methods of cigarette manufacture. One machine shreds and feeds out the 'makings.' Another rolls them into a never-ending length of cigarette, which, as it oozes forth, is slipped into multiples as rapidly as a machine gun sprays bullets.

"Other machines make containers, affix revenue stamps, imprint and record serial numbers—in fact, do everything for the smoker except to hand him a match. It is the machine that plays the title role of Carmen, while the girl inspectors are merely understudies.

"Winston-Salem's stamp-sticking machines consume annually the most expensive meal in the world—a matter of $100,000,000 worth of Uncle Sam's familiar blue imprints. That is the sum of her federal taxes, which represent one-half of those paid by North Carolina."

AMUSEMENTS

"Variety" Paramount's latest effort to entertain a bored, blasé world, met with success at the Met theater last night. Among other things it serves to rewelcome an old favorite of local moviegoers, to introduce one who's destined to create a furore in film circles and incidentally to show us Americans that all good films are not made within Hollywood's confines.

The "old favorite" is Emil Jannings, star of "Passion," "The Last Laugh" and many others; the new one's known as Lya de Putti. Words are futile when trying to describe the performances contributed by these two players. They have a style which is absolutely unique. It is impossible to say that either Mr. Jannings or Miss de Putti remind you of "so-and-so." They are like themselves and—that's praise, enough!

The title, "Variety," has nothing to do with the well known "spice of life." Evidently it's significant of the word, "vaudeville," because the film is a story concerned with three members of a vaudeville team.

Athos, Porthos and—but no—that's another story; Artinelli, Bertha and Boss were three acrobats. Bertha and Boss were married—happily, until handsome Artinelli joined their act. Then trouble set in. Boss discovered Bertha loved his partner.

One night—hundreds of feet o'er the heads of a huge audience—Boss struggled with his conscience. An easy way to his wife's heart lay open. In the triple somersault, if he should just happen to miss the flying hands, his problems would all be solved. What does he do?

Well, we don't blame you if you want to know. We did—and on finding out — were certainly surprised. "Variety" is unreservedly recommended.

SHAKER SECT IS FAST VANISHING

Once Powerful Community Victim of Unscrupulous Exploitation.

New Lebanon, N. Y.—Fantastic religious dogmas that forbade marriage, insisted on absolute separation of the sexes and on equality of inheritance have thinned the ranks of a once powerful sect, the Shakers.

Only a handful remain here at New Lebanon, where the ruling body of Shaker elders once held forth, directing the destinies of flourishing Shaker communities along the eastern seaboard whose membership numbered thousands.

Only a single Shaker colony remains at Lebanon, Ohio, at one time a stronghold of the sect. Other colonies still extant but in pitiful contrast to their former condition may be found at East Canterbury, N. H., and Pittsfield, Mass.

History of Sect Strange.

Annals of the sect are strong and colorful. Under the leadership of James and Jane Wardleigh, in 1747, a group of Quakers, whose religious fervor caused them to twitch and tremble during services, separated from the main body and founded what they termed the United Society of Believers in Christ's Second Appearance. The term Shaker, first applied in derision by scoffers, was later accepted proudly by the brethren.

Dancing with which the Shakers accompany their religious rites is described as a picturesque ceremony. At the community house of worship, after exhortation by the elders, the males of the congregation would form ranks in a half circle, according to size and age, facing the women who were arranged likewise.

At a signal the choir would sing while the ranks moved up and down, swinging arms in rhythm, rising on tiptoe and shaking or swaying from side to side.

Shakers contributed much to America's trade in the early days. Possessing a reputation for prophecy and religious foresight, the Shaker communities drew into the fold the residents of surrounding neighborhoods who at that time were willing to give up their worldly belongings and live a life of celibacy.

The community became not only self-sustaining but wealthy. Shrewd Shaker farmers bought the best and richest lands for the communities, the Shaker workshops humming at broom and furniture making, their machinists invented the buzz-saw, and money rolled in on the simple people. Their furniture and other products became famous for soundness and appearance.

Exploited by Unscrupulous.

Exploited by unscrupulous leaders, the strength of the Shaker colonies was dissipated as their wealth grew. Religious fervor no longer flourished, the binding tie that held all in the community was broken, the socialistic principle of equal distribution abandoned.

Shaker evangelists began to encounter difficulty in gaining converts. With the promise of abundance no longer held out, people were skeptical of Shaker doctrines. The simple faith of itself possessed no common appeal, and thus the sect dwindled away.

Americans Hold Vigil on Peak for Science

Cape Town, Union of South Africa.—Two Americans have begun a lonely three-year vigil on a mountain peak near here with a view to studying sun spots in the interest of better weather forecasting.

Supplied with an immense amount of astronomical apparatus, F. Greely and W. Hoover took up their abode on the peak, a mile high, where the atmosphere is clear of dust and there is little rain to interfere with their observations.

They have a wireless set and can listen in on the radio concerts at Johannesburg and Cape Town.

The observations are being carried on under the direction of the Smithsonian Institution in connection with similar observations in Chile and California.

COMPANY PLANS 8-MILE BRIDGE ON CHESAPEAKE

Project Calls for $10,000,000 and Would Bring Maryland Products Nearer World Markets.

Baltimore, Md.—Maryland's agriculturally rich eastern shore, with its canneries and oyster packing plants nearly fifty miles nearer Baltimore by highway and hence nearer the markets of the world, would be one of the outstanding results of a proposed eight-mile bridge span across Chesapeake bay.

The span, which would be perhaps the longest of its kind in the world, also would make the highway distance from the southern half of Delaware less to Baltimore than to Philadelphia. Its present normal market.

Provided War department, congressional and other sanctions are forthcoming, the bridge will be started next spring by the Chesapeake Bay Bridge company, just chartered.

The company, the first of many predecessors which have toyed with the dream of a bay span to distill a thirty-year bridge romance into hard facts, is prepared to spend $10,000,000 in construction work. The bridge would be operated on a toll basis.

Previous groups, with the same end in view, have dreamed dreams of tubes under the bay, rapid ferry and barge fleets and trolley car bridges at costs estimated from $1,000,000 to $20,000,000.

The projected eight-mile span would be from 20 to 27 feet wide, set on concrete piling. It would be so placed that it would not interfere with marine traffic to the capes, and two draws would permit passage of vessels to the Susquehanna river and the Delaware and Chesapeake canal.

Erection of the bridge represents a difficult engineering feat.

Christmas Pies and Puddings

THE Christmas feast is bound up with hosts of food traditions, gathered up through the centuries, all with association and stories which make them dear to us. None is more universal than that of the Christmas plum pudding, and the Christmas pie, which, though there be fowl or roast, baked foods, boiled or stewed, must always have a place on the Christmas menu.

Other pies and tarts, cranberry, pumpkin, and fruit puddings of many kinds are famous in song and story. They may have their place still, and without the cost in time and effort which were needed in other times when every step in the making of the pudding, mince meat and pie had to be done in the kitchen. The modern housewife buys her plum pudding and fig pudding in cans, entirely prepared, needing only re-heating and a holly garnish to make it festive for the table. Her pie and tart fillings, fruit for puddings of all kinds, she buys canned, mince meat and mince without meat, pumpkin, cranberry, and all the other good fruits, cherries, peaches, pineapple, ready for her use in any dish she chooses. Even pie crust comes ready prepared, so even if you're busy or tired you can have your Christmas pie.

A can of mince meat and a package of prepared pie crust will make a mince pie with both lower and top crust. For one pie with both crusts, open a can of mince meat, add one and a quarter cups of water and boil for half an hour. The juice of canned fruit or cider may be used in place of water, or a part of the water. Be careful that the filling does not burn.

Meantime, make two pie shells by adding three or four tablespoons of water to the contents of a package of prepared pie crust and roll out to a quarter inch thickness on a floured board. Bake the shells on the greased OUTSIDE of two pie tins, then take them off, put one crust on the right side of the pie plate, fill it with the mince meat. Fit on the upper crust and pinch together with white of egg. Heat together for five or ten minutes. Serve hot or cold, with or without American cheese.

Other good Christmas pies that you may wish to try are suggested here.

CRANBERRY AND RAISIN PIE — For one pie, use half the package of prepared pie crust, bake one pie shell as for mince pie. Meantime, open a small can of cranberries. Add it to a cupful of raisins, one and a quarter cupfuls of sugar, two table-spoons of flour. When the crust is ready, turn it right side up, fill it with the mixture and bake five to ten minutes. A meringue may be used.

SWEET POTATO CUSTARD PIE — Into the baked lower crust of the pie put a sweet potato mixture made as follows: Cream two tablespoons of butter and a cup of sugar, add yolks of three eggs, then add gradually a half can of sweet potatoes, mashed to a pulp, the grated rind and the juice of an orange, a half teaspoon of cinnamon. Fill the crust with the potato mixture and bake for half an hour in a quick oven. Beat the whites of the eggs with two tablespoons of powdered sugar and heap on top of the finished pie. Brown in the oven for two or three minutes.

CREOLE FRUIT PUDDING — This pudding is not so rich as plum pudding and can be given to children frequently without fear of overtaxing their digestions. It can be made with any of the canned fruits. Beat yolks and whites of three eggs separately, until very light, and mix. Then add two cups of milk and beat till smooth. Melt two tablespoons of butter, add to mixture and then put in two cups of flour, two tablespoons of baking powder and a half teaspoon of salt. Add crushed pineapple, sliced peaches, red sour cherries, or any other canned fruit, cut in small pieces, using a No. 2 size can. Turn the pudding into a mould or pan and bake for an hour. Serve hot with cream or hard sauce, as with plum pudding.

Energy Foods for Cold Weather

WINTER days! The tang in the air stirs young and old to be up and doing! School absorbs the minds and hearts of the children to whom it is their whole business in life. It absorbs their energy, too, quite as much as does the play and recreation of leisure hours, for the brain needs many calories on which to work. It is the mother's job to see that the busy growing bodies and brains get proper foods, proteins, starches and minerals which are so necessary. A little forethought in stocking the shelves of canned foods will give the housewife ready command of vegetables which contain the right food elements in the most easily digested form, corn, navy, lima and stringless beans, spaghetti, sweet potatoes, peas. They contain starches to supply fuel, protein to build muscle, minerals and vitamins to keep little bodies in good condition.

Not only are these prepared vegetables in the most easily digested form, important for the health of children and grown folk as well, but they are in the most convenient form. This is important for the housewife. How simple it is for her when she scans the luncheon or dinner menu to make it thoroughly balanced by the addition of one of her quickly prepared canned foods.

White potatoes, everyone knows are high in starch, but not so many people know that lima beans are even higher and that sweet potatoes are highest in starch of all vegetables. Lima and navy beans, known generally as baked beans, have the added merit of containing a high percentage of protein and for that reason they form a well balanced dish. Red kidney beans are much the same. Only a point or two lower than potatoes in starch are peas. This is fortunate for they are always well-liked and a can of peas may be prepared in a number of tasty ways. Neck and neck with peas in starch and in goodly proportion of protein, we find parsnips and right close behind comes corn. Other vegetables that must not be neglected in the diet that gives energy are squash and stringless beans, also turnips.

Hot vegetables make the best luncheon for school children. With minds set on getting back to the school room and the playground, they are inclined to hurry and should therefore lunch on easily digested food. Milk, of course, they must have, a pint a day each at the very least, and fruits. Hawaiian pineapple, for instance, has not only minerals, energizing sugar galore in its syrup, but a large protein content as well. This is true of many other canned fruits.

Cream soups supply milk in the diet very well, and soup as a first course has its best use in preparing the stomach for its task of digesting other foods. Among the most important soups in calory and vitamin content are first, cream of tomato soup, then plain tomato soup, pea soup. Bean and corn soup, too, have many calories and vitamins. How easy they are to prepare when the housewife has only to open a can and add seasoning, or at the most an equal quantity of milk or water. Try your child on a lunch of cream of tomato soup, spinach and a poached egg. You will like such a lunch, too, and will be glad to share it, particularly since it takes such a short time to prepare. For another day, make the lunch of a can of Italian spaghetti with a simple dessert such as rice pudding or hg pudding and a glass of milk. Spaghetti comes entirely ready to serve and has a tasty bit of cheese added to the tomato sauce. The cheese adds a few precious calories as well.

Dinner, too, must supply many calories to all the family through fall and winter days. A corn pudding will be popular. Make it with a can of corn to which a pint of milk, two well-beaten eggs and tablespoon of butter are added. Season with salt and pepper and bake in a buttered baking dish until set and brown. For another dinner serve candied sweet potatoes, easy to prepare when canned sweet potatoes are used. A medium size can will serve six persons. Put layers of sweet potatoes into a baking dish, sprinkling each layer with brown sugar. Pour a half cup of melted butter over the completed dish. Marshmallows put on top a few minutes before removing from the oven will make it a special treat.

O. and Lacy (Taylor) Fitzgerald and was born and reared on the farm on which he died 75 years later. He was twice married, his first wife, who was Miss Emma Crookham, having preceded him in death. He is survived by his second wife who was formerly Miss Charlotte Brown and a daughter Mrs. Warnie Taylor and a son Cicil, both of Chinook, Montana, and one sister, Mrs. Elias Florence, of Jackson township.

The funeral will be held from the late home tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock with burial in the family burial ground.

Growing Brazil Nuts

The bureau of plant industry says that Brazil nuts are not grown in North America, because it is very difficult to germinate the seeds. Unless the seeds are transplanted in the pod, they are sure to fail. There have been few records of success. Brazil has passed a law which prohibits the exportation of the seeds of Brazil nuts in pods. This is to keep the industry within the country.

Remarkable Sunset

In the autumn and winter of 1883, a vivid red glow suffused the western sky for more than an hour after the sun set. Volcanic dust and gaseous matter from an eruption of Krakatau in Sunda straits were the probable cause.

London, Jan. 2.—The Plant of the London Baking Co. was totally destroyed by fire early this morning with a loss estimated at $10,000 in the worst fire in London in many months. The fire started from a gas heater and had gained such headway that it could not be checked. The building was owned by Mrs. Joe Gardner of Maryland and the stock and equipment by Jack Stinton, local baker. Only a small amount of insurance was carried on either building or stock.

Duty of Possession

All possession, great or small, of the means of life is just so much responsibility to use the power for life's sake and not for the sake of self-indulgence; any of one thing we may be sure; nothing can ever be economically desirable that is morally wrong.
—Edward Howard Griggs.

Denmark's School Year

Practically all the schools of Denmark are in session 246 days every year. The average loss per pupil on account of illness is 8.6 days a year.

Primitive Car Heating

Railway cars in Italy are heated by hot-water bottles of steel, filled from the engine and placed under the seats.
When more heat is needed more tanks
are added or the hot water renewed.

Path of the Israelites

It is supposed the children of Israel crossed the Gulf of Suez at its north-not definitely known. Some think it was near the town of Suez, others that it was about 18 miles south at the mouth of the Wady Taurik.

same idea over too many times.

OHIO FARMERS ARE ASKED TO SAVE 5 DAYS

So They Can Attend Farmers
Week at the Ohio State University.

Ohio's state-wide farmers' institute,
Farmers' Week at the Ohio State university, begins Monday, January 31, and ends Friday, February 4, this year.

The agricultural college extension service of the state university makes this announcement as final plans for the detailed program are made. This 1927 gathering will be the fifteenth annual Farmers' Week in the history of the Ohio State university, and one of the oldest farmers' weeks established by any state agricultural college.

Crowds of 5000 or more are the rule
at Farmers' Week now. At the first Farmers' Week back in 1913, attendance totaled 140. Programs for the state-wide gathering back in those years, a glance at the 1915 Farmers'
Week program reveals, included from 50 to 75 events or lectures for the five days and from 25 to 45 speakers.

Growth of Farmers' Week in attendance has entailed growth of the program. On the program for this coming Farmers' Week there will be listed about 350 lecturers, exhibits, demonstrations, meetings, entertainments and the like. Some 200 speakers, many from other states and many of them outstanding farmers, have been engaged.

TIME PAYMENTS

AND CONTENTMENT.
"If some philanthropist should suddenly give the French people an automobile for every family, on condition that they paid the installments on them, the long economic crisis of that country would end automatically, and the franc would be back at par within a few weeks." This remark was made recently by a gentleman with a very keen understanding not only of economics but of human nature.

The purchase of commodities from income rather than from capital has reached a greater degree of popularity in this country than anywhere else on earth. Eighty per cent of the motor cars which bring pleasure and efficiency to the whole family are purchased on time and paid for out of income. The owners will fight desperately before they will fail to meet their payments on the appointed date.
Automobile paper is probably the most substantial that there is. If the French people had the same general incentive to work and to meet payments on something that gives them unalloyed pleasure and profit, they would go to work with a vim that would quickly right the economic situation of their country.

After all, an incentive is the thing that creates energy. No man works for the pure joy of working. He works because he wants that labor to give him something in return. In this country, it is not too much to say that motor cars are our national incentive.
We all want them, and we are willing to work hard to get them. And when we have made a down payment on a car and are enjoying its actual use, we will work even harder to keep the pleasure and profit that we are earning by our labor and frugality.

To produce a happy and contented people, let them have the utmost in the joy of living and pay for it out of their incomes. — Automotive Daily News.

WOMAN, 92, BOASTS 308 LIVING HEIRS

Challenges Any Grandmother
to Show Equal Record.

Ogden, Utah.—Boasting that she has the largest posterity of any woman in the country, Mrs. Sarah Jane Taylor of Harrisville recently celebrated her ninety-second birthday. She has 308 living descendants, who include 8 children, 50 grandchildren, 189 great-grandchildren and 61 great-great-grandchildren.

She has challenged any woman in the country to show a larger number of lineal descendants and is anxious to correspond with any such woman.

Mrs. Taylor has been married twice, the first time when she was only sixteen. The marriage was with Bailey Lake, a fellow Mormon convert whom the young girl met on her way to Utah in 1850. They settled in Ogden where four children were born.

When the youngest was still a baby Brigham Young pressed Mr. Lake into service and sent him to Idaho to spread the Mormon gospel among the Indians. With the other Mormon elders at Fort Lemhi, Lake was attacked by Indians. The little garrison, besieged, sent Lake as a messenger for help. He was ambushed and killed in the Malad mountains.

A few years later his widow was married to the late Pleasant Green Taylor. Six children, four of them still living, were born from this union.

Mrs. Taylor was born in Port Gibson, Miss., November 12, 1834. She has the distinction of being one of the few remaining Mormons who crossed the plains in ox carts in the early fifties. She was among the religious followers who left the northern part of the state and went south when General Johnston's army came to Utah
to subdue Brigham Young.

Eat in Darkness as

Health Aid, Says Doctor

London.—With so much stress being laid on the virtues of artificial sunlight, special interest attaches to the announcement, made by a prominent London doctor, that we do not sufficiently consider the health value
of darkness.

The authority states that in his opinion many of the ills that have their origin in digestive troubles are traceable to the too lavish use of light at meals. Brilliant lighting, he asserts, is harmful in dining rooms, restaurants and other places where meals are partaken.

Our digestive processes, on the perfect working of which human health and happiness so largely depend, are interfered with by the extra stimulant provided by garish lighting. The demands made on the senses by such factors as bright lights and arresting sounds mean that blood is drawn from the stomach to the brain and muscles, and the assimilation of food naturally suffers.

According to this authority the best light for meal times is that given by shaded candles. But we should all be better in health and in temper, the physician states, if we ate our meals
in semidarkness.

Plan to Revive Whaling Off California Coast

San Diego, Calif.—After a hiatus of more than half a century whaling operations are to be resumed on an extensive scale on the southern California coast. A whaling fleet consisting of the factory steamer Loring, with four killers, has established a base at South Bay, San Clemente island, and has started a hunt for the famous California "grays," the humpbacks and the sperm, the only species frequenting these waters.

The whale oil, fertilizer and chicken feed, the principal products derived from the whale catch, will be disposed of entirely in the California markets, officials of the whaling company announce.

Slump in Fur

Washington.—Fur coats may gain an enhanced standing as luxuries if the supply of fur-bearing animals continues to decrease as steadily as in the last year. The Agricultural department said the number of fur wearers was increasing much faster than fur bearers.

Canadian Farmer Seeks Meteor Buried in Yard

Detroit, Mich.—George Turner, a farmer living near Amherstburg, Ont., and a number of his friends, are planning to dig up what is believed to be a portion of a meteor that buried itself in the ground outside Turner's home.

The missile is buried about ten feet and the hole, which is about twelve inches in diameter, indicates that it must have been whirling at a great rate of speed
when it struck.

"My wife and I were reading in the front room when my attention was attracted by what I thought resembled a pillar of flame," Turner said. "At first I believed the house was afire and I rushed out of doors, but I found nothing."

Turner plans to send the missile to the government laboratories at Toronto for examination.

MAN CONFESSES TO MURDERING MOTHER-IN-LAW

A wisp of hair torn from a man's head by the roots, and two bone buttons, snatched from his coat by a woman in her fierce struggle to live, caused the arrest for murder early Tuesday of Harold E. Webster, 26, a real estate dealer of Miami, Florida.

District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards announced after questioning Webster
all night that he had confessed beating his mother-in-law to death.

The body of the victim, Mrs. Catherine Gallaway, 45, was found Monday. Several strands of hair and two buttons were clutched tightly in her hands.

Edwards said Webster admitted crushing his mother-in-law's skull in a quarrel after she protested his taking away from his home his infant son after a fight with his wife.

Much Sugar From Beets

There was a time when practically all sugar was extracted from cane.
Now a large proportion of the world supply is derived from the once despised beet, brought to perfection
after many years of experimenting.
